

I would like to voice my strong support for the FCC's proposed rule requiring wireless phone companies to ensure the portability of phone numbers when customers switch their service provider. For both my own personal use and business use, this would be of great benefit, both in terms of convenience to the consumer and the increased competition.